Hold tightly to your city tax receipts. There is no telling how many will be asked to pay additional tax, because under the present peculiar manner of caring for the city business no credit had been given on the clerk's books for taxes paid.

The city's finances, under the present rotten administration of affairs controlled by the Republican Ring are in a most deplorable condition, yet it does not seem quite right for the ring to undertake to recoup by compelling people to pay the special assessments twice. That makes a heavy burden on individuals who are not willing to stand it—more particularly when the money is used with such reckless prodigality as is now done in Lima.

Six hundred thousand dollars in debt, which is constantly increasing, and the clerk's accounts so kept that people are requested to pay tax twice, is the condition the Republican administration of Lima has got this city into. It would be a calamity to entrust this gang with the county's affairs.

The Republican administration of Lima wish the public to distinctly understand that they do not believe in Henry George's single tax vagaries. They are true believers in double taxation. Taxpayers pay the tax when it is due, and are soon thereafter requested by them to step up to the rack and pay it again, or have their property go on the delinquent list.

In Lima, where the tax levy is nearly three per cent, under the noxious management of public affairs by the Republican administration, people ought to be exempt from paying the same tax more than once. But once does not seem to satisfy the cupidity of the Republican Ring controlling our city affairs. They would have a man pay twice, in order to recoup the city's finances.

As a sample of how profitable it is to have Republicans manage county affairs the taxpayers are cited to the adjoining county of Hardin, where the fraudulent issue of bonds issued with the name of the Republican auditor will cost the taxpayers of that county thousands and thousands of dollars. Yet that auditor was not punished. He caused the innocent taxpayers of Hardin county, who had placed him in a position of honor and trust, to pay out their money for his acts, yet not one cent of restitution did he make. Like the Republican Ring of Lima, he regarded the taxpayers as his prey and their money as a toy to be given away.

The extravagance and wanton waste of this city's money by the Republican administration has led to the expenditure of so much of the funds that they are all entirely exhausted. Bonds have been issued until the aggregate is about half a million dollars; orders have been issued until no one knows the amount of the floating indebtedness. And all at the expense of the taxpayers. And on the top of all this burden, taxpayers' payments are so manipulated by the city government that proper credits are not given and they are asked to come up and pay the same tax twice. This would place more money into the treasury for the Republican city Ring to squander, but the people will not stand it. The gang have bled them on taxes now until endurance has ceased to be a virtue.

There Are Still Heroes. Who says there is no pluck or manly courage or unselfishness left among the young men of this generation? Certainly no one who reads the story of Edward James Glave in The Century. His life was a very short one, covering less than 33 years, yet he managed to crowd into it brave, unselfish work, thrilling exploit and dazzling achievement enough to make his name live among men.

From his boyhood this English youth had followed with breathless interest every step of Stanley's way through Africa. He had read the story so closely that he knew every page of it, and his heart bounded within him to join Stanley in Africa. When he left school, he served a brief time in a counting room. But he was a born explorer, and his heart was far away in the jungle. He besieged the International African association with letters, gave them no rest till at last he received a commission to go to Africa. He burned with desire to do the hardest work, and Stanley gave him just what he wanted and chose.

His family and friends could ask no better epitaph to his memory than the words of his commander:

His commander's words, his indomitable determination to do the most that can be done in a given period, the love which he set about it and the absorbing interest it has for him make me, who know his worth, feel sorry that he is so dead and when he could be so happy. Many people have called me hard, but they are always those whose presence a field of work could best dispense with and whose nobility is too nice to be signed with. Glave is not one of those, but a man who will take a task to his big shoulders and take it with a fierce joy.

It gives the story a melancholy interest to know that afterward the young hero found the big, hard task he craved and died just when he had accomplished it.

Talking at the Funeral. McKinley, in Ohio, is embarrassing the campaign managers by talking about his tariff. Still it's not so much a case of talking it to death as after death.—Exchange.

REBUKE IT

And Compel the Restoration of a Fair and Just Judiciary.

A Purely Partisan Judiciary Does Not Promote a Wholly Corrupt Judiciary. Any Manly to Be the Mid-dling of the Masses.

The people of Ohio should not for a moment overlook the despicable work of the last Republican legislature in reducing the Ohio judiciary to a purely partisan machine.

This was deliberately done and done for a purpose. The work of the bosses and the gang is marked out far into the future, and preparations have been and are being made that it shall not be interfered with.

Set it down as the recorded experience of all history that a purely partisan judiciary soon becomes a corrupt judiciary, and a corrupt judiciary jeopardizes every public interest and every private right.

Jeffries was first a partisan judge and made a judge to enforce, by judicial decree, the bidding of his master. He soon graduated into the most infamous corrupt judge mentioned in the history of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence, and a judge no more thinks of following his precedents than he does of following the precedents of Nero or Caligula.

Not until the advent of the Seventieth and the notorious Seventy-first general assemblies was the judiciary of Ohio made a partisan machine.

The seventeenth and seventy-first general assemblies, with their immense Republican majorities, did baleful work in dragging the judicial ermine through the dirtiest section of the pool of party politics.

While the work of carving up one of the common pleas districts in which the Democrats had a small majority, so that it would only be possible to elect one Democratic judge out of thirteen, a prominent member of the legislature was remonstrated with, and said in reply: "If I could have my way, I would re-zag the judicial districts from side to side of the state so that no Democrat should ever be elected to a judicial position in Ohio."

He didn't quite succeed, but he managed to cut them down so that the Democrats get less than 30 judges out of 125. The Republican legislator who expressed this view is a lawyer, and is himself a standing candidate for judicial honors.

Among the things to be indorsed or repudiated at the election in November, 1895 is this monstrous doctrine that the judiciary is to be made a corrupt party machine.

People who think it ought to be made such will vote the Republican ticket. People who think otherwise, will vote against the Republican ticket, without reference to former ties. Men should not permit their party affiliations to blind them to the dangers of the situation. The state judiciary has been partitioned by a legislature that is a stench in the nostrils of honest people. The creature will not rise above its creator.

Having been thoroughly partitioned, the next step is corruption, extortion and oppression, such as characterized the English judiciary in the days of Jeffries, when clients and counsel, the causes and justice, won in the tribunals. The people should be warned in time, and while it is yet possible to undo the wickedness of the legislature. We have no hesitancy in saying that the partisan acts of the legislature in tampering with the judiciary for the basest purposes, is the worst crime ever committed against public interest and judicial morality, and if condoned by the people at the next election will afflict Ohio with untold evils for years to come. No right-minded man, no matter what his political associations, can afford to give a vote of political indorsement.

We have denounced this political crime against public policy, and we shall continue to denounce it, in the hope that the people will become aroused to the dangers that threaten them.

A corrupt and pre-judging body of lawmakers is bad enough; but a partisan, corrupt and pre-judging judiciary is a thousand times worse.

A reckless, incompetent, indifferent and extravagant state government and a bankrupted state treasury are bad enough, but a judiciary which is mere party machine multiples all other evils, indefinitely.

See to it that this great and flagrant wrong is righted. See to it that the men who committed it are not re-elected to the Seventy-second general assembly.

It is an open secret, known to a very wide circle of men in the Republican ranks, that the friends of Senator Sherman in different parts of the state are holding quiet meetings for the purpose of expressing their real and indignant feelings, while they compare his career of exalted statesmanship in the house, the senate and the cabinet, his high and lofty bearing, his peerless record as a public servant and 40 years in the harness, as crystallized in the statutes of the United States and comparing these things with J. B. Foraker's matchless display in the line of pyrotechnics, his rebel flag bombast, his skinkiness stories, and, worst of all, his attempt a few years ago to smirch the name of Sherman by connecting it with a ballot-box swindle and a premeditated forgery. When the friends of Sherman compare these things, are they moved to inconvenience themselves to make Foraker a senator? Not at all. They have other views and intentions.—Columbus Press.

After a time the water began to run from the child's mouth, and before long signs of life began to be seen. He continued his stroking until the child was fully restored to consciousness, and then he placed it in its mother's arms and departed long before the physician made his appearance. Who the man was is not known, but the child that was dead now lives.

All the men were residents of this city, and together with two companions, attempted to cross the river from Ferry Bar to Meter's pavilion, in Anne Arundel county. A strong east wind made the water very rough, and when about half way across the boat began to fill, went over, leaving the pleasure seekers struggling in the water. The reverend speaker said the parent was a living book from which the child learned.

Over two hundred families became members of the society last night and any one wishing to become members can do so at any time by applying to the pastor. TURNED OVER

Did a Freight Engine on the Lake Erie & Western.

An Accident West of Celina which Might Have Resulted More Seriously

Several days ago a bad wreck was caused on the L. E. & W. west of Celina through the carelessness of a gang of section men.

The men had taken up seven rails from the track, when Engineer Wm. Fess and Conductor Aaa Ridenour, both of this city, with engine 105 and an east-bound freight train, came upon the scene at a rate of 30 or 35 miles an hour. The section men had placed a red flag about five car lengths from where the rails were torn out, but the train could not stop in several times that distance. Engineer Fess saw the danger before he reached the flag, and reversed the engine and whistled for brakes, but could not stop, and he and his fireman and the head brakeman jumped to save their lives. When the engine struck the place where the rails were out, it left the ties and plunged into a ditch beside the track, turning over, and stuck there with its dome down and drivers in the air. The wash-out plugs came out, letting all the water out of the boiler. None of the crew were injured in jumping and Engineer Fess hastened to remove the fire from the fire box to prevent the boiler from being burned. Several cars were wrecked and the wreck train and crew were at work several days clearing the wreck. The crew had to dig a deep hole beneath the engine and let it roll back into its drivers before they could get it onto the track. The engine was brought here Saturday evening and was run into the round house yesterday.

SUSPICIOUS ENTRY

Of a Horse Made Here During the Recent Fair.

The Owner of the Horse Arrested at Millersburg—Charges Against the Owner.

During the fair, which closed September 27, a suspicious entry was made at Millersburg, says a dispatch from that place. It was mailed at Kenton on September 17th and only got here on September 24th. The name of this horse entered was Albert French by Crawford. The entry was made by James Snyder, of Findlay. Identification was demanded and the man in charge made some unsatisfactory statements. The horse was allowed to go and got some of his winnings. After the fair, some of the horsemen not being satisfied, commenced an investigation. It resulted in a warrant being sworn out for the man in charge of the horse here. He was followed to Akron, where he had won a race. He entered at Warren under the name of Albert French and also at Orrville. He was traced to Lancaster, where he had his horse entered in slow races. The entry was under the name of Mrs. A. Starbuck. Sheriff Kornas arrested him at the last named place, and brought him here. He is now in jail. It was ascertained, and has been admitted by this man, who gives his name as J. O. Bartow, that he was entered at Toledo, Van Wert, Lima, Kenton, Bowling Green and other places under different names. The secretary of the American Trotting Association has witnesses now on the way here to testify in the case. Bartow will have a hearing tomorrow before Justice C. A. Estell. He is a heavy set man, weighs 210 pounds and is well known to parties here under his correct name. The horse is a fine looking brown, said to be six years old, and very speedy.

STREET TALK.

At the meeting of the Lima Philosophical Society this evening Mr. Shelby Downard will open the discussion with a paper on Occult Philosophy. It will be discussed by Mr. J. G. Lamison.

Yesterday Kennard Hoyer and a couple of friends rode to Gome on their bicycles and just as they were starting on the return trip Hoyer fell and broke his handle bars so badly that they were useless. He secured a forked stick which he managed to fasten to the head of his machine and guided the disabled bike home again, although his extremely raised handle bar was inconvenient against the head wind.

UNCLE SAM'S BUILDING

Thrown Open for Business this Morning.

The Postoffice Department Now Settled in the Government Building.

The government building was thrown open for business this morning and everything about the postoffice worked as smoothly as though there had been no change in quarters. The transfer was completed yesterday and this morning found the department in their new home, after several days' hard work on the part of Postmaster Mehahey and his force. The first letter delivered by carriers was to Cashier C. D. Crises, of the First National bank, and the first letter from the general delivery window was delivered to G. Mattison. General delivery clerk Otmar Feltz purchased the last stamp in the old room and the first one in the new one. Assistant postmaster Hutton distributed the first mail in the new office.

The exchange of old keys for new ones began this morning, holders being entitled to a rebate of thirty cents in each instance. The holders of old boxes have been given the same numbers, as nearly as possible, in the new office.

In the Cab of a Fast Locomotive.

The locomotive engineer is a remarkably placid fellow, with a habit of deliberate precision in his look and motions. He occasionally turns a calm eye to his gauges and then resumes his quiet watch ahead. The three levers which he has to manipulate are under his hand ready for instant use, and when they are used it is quietly and in order, as an organist pulls out his stops. The noise in the cab makes conversation difficult, but is not as bad as that heard in a car when passing another train, with or without the windows open, and in looking out of the engine cab the objects are approached gradually, not rushed past as when one looks laterally out of a parlor car window. The fact is the engineer does not look at the side—he is looking ahead—and therefore the speed seems less as the objects are approached gradually.

Those who have ridden at 90 miles an hour on a locomotive know that on a good road, and there are many such, the engine is not "shaken and swayed in a mad manner," but is rather comfortable, and the speed is not so apparent as when one is riding in a parlor car, where only a lateral view is had. The engineer can be very comfortable if he is quite sure of the track ahead, and it is only in rounding curves or in approaching crossings that he feels nervous, and it is doubtful if it is any more strain to ride a locomotive at high speed than to run a bicycle through crowded thoroughfares. Judging by the countenances of the bicycle rider and the engineer, the engineer has rather the best of it. —Railroad Gazette.

That Tired Feeling

Is a common complaint and it is a dangerous symptom. It means that the system is debilitated because of impure blood, and in this condition it is especially liable to attacks of disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the remedy for this condition, and also for that weakness which prevails at the change of season, climate or life.

Hood's Pills act easily, yet promptly and efficiently on the bowels and liver. 25c.

Bathed Before He Started.

The late Sir Charles Napier, rightly or wrongly, had the credit of not being very partial to ablution. Wicked men say that when he went out to take the command in chief of the army, after the reverse of Cullinstown, he proceeded, immediately after landing at Calcutta, to see Lord Dalhousie at the government house. He was, of course, cordially received. "I am very glad to see you, Sir Charles," said the governor general, "you have not come before you were wanted. We must have a long talk together. But in the first place we must have dinner, which will soon be ready, and there is just time to get a bath first."

"Thank you, my lord," responded Sir Charles, "I shall be quite ready for dinner, but I don't want a bath—I had a good wash at Alexandria." —London Telegraph.

Spectacles.

Boger Bacon was the first to suggest the use of spectacles. When they came into use in Italy, about the year 1285, on the recommendation of Alessandro di Spina, a monk of Spain, women were forbidden to wear them because it was thought that such facial ornamentations would make them vain.

SELECTIONS

"THE LAST CARTRIDGES."

Remember That Alphonse de Neuville Made a Mistake in His Famous Picture.

The recent anniversary of the battle of Sedan, which was celebrated with such patriotic ardor in Germany, has caused the French newspapers to publish accounts of several little episodes of the fight, which were not known generally before. Everybody who has stopped in front of the picture shops on Broadway has seen the prints of "Le Dernieres Cartouches," by Alphonse de Neuville. The picture represents the interior of a house on the outskirts of Bazailles, where a handful of French marines, under Commander (now General) Lambert, made a heroic stand against the Bavarians.

The house stands today just as it stood after the fight. It is something of a museum at present, where tourists and artists love to linger in order, they say, to have the pleasure of walking into Neuville's painting. The hole in the roof and the old chest against which Captain Lambert leaned to rest his wounded foot are still there, just as they are in the picture; but, unfortunately for the historical accuracy of the work, there was no Turco there. The man who fired the last cartridges was Captain Aubert of the Marine corps. Whether the artist wished to glorify the Turcos, even at the expense of accuracy, or made a blunder, nobody can tell now, but the substantial accuracy of the matter cannot be disputed, as it is shown in the official report of Captain Lambert to General Vaseigne, commanding the division of marine infantry at Bazailles. This is the part of the report which refers to the episode in question:

"In order to continue our defense with greater advantage we retired into an isolated house, situated upon a culminating point in Bazailles. I had with me Captains Aubert, Bourgey, Picard, Dalaunay and Lieutenants Escoubert and St. Felix and about 100 men. Thanks to the activity of Captain Aubert the house was quickly put in a state of defense. This brave officer took up a gun and placed himself at one of the windows, and by his marvelous skill excited an emulation among the men which was far from excluding coolness. Nevertheless in spite of the considerable losses which the enemy suffered, they advanced constantly. Seeing that our house was about to be surrounded and finding it impossible to walk, I asked the officers who were with me to leave me there with a few men and to fall back upon the mass of the division. Not one would consent to do it, and all declared that they would fight with me until the last. I yielded to their desire, especially as we had not lost as yet all hope of an offensive movement by our troops. We did not then know that they also were kept very busy, and, hearing the incessant noise of the mitrailleuses we fancied that they were approaching. In the village also they were holding out still, and we could distinguish perfectly the difference between the detonations of our chassepots and those of the Bavarian guns. It was the brave Captain Bourgey who was continuing his desperate defense in the village.

"After about two hours we were surrounded completely by the Fifteenth Bavarian regiment. Soon our house was in a pitiable condition. The doors and windows were riddled with bullets and the roof had been half torn away by a shell which wounded four or five of our men. In spite of all this the struggle was continued with determination. It ceased only when our munitions were exhausted. Then we began to think of surrendering if that was possible. Our enemies were shouting, 'Kill them!' And we had little hope of receiving any quarter. Our soldiers were not deceived in this matter, and they wanted to come out in a last charge with their bayonets. I stopped them, saying to them that I would go out and that if they killed me then it would be time enough for them to sell their lives as dearly as they could.

"The moment I stepped out of the door about 30 bayonets were pointed at my breast, and unquestionably I would have been massacred had not the Bavarian Captain Lissignuolo rushed between me and his men. That was an act of bravery on his part, for his soldiers were so much exasperated over the enormous losses which they had suffered at our hands that in their blind rage they could hardly discern anything. I shall never forget that I owe my life to that chivalrous enemy. Neither can I forget the generous words which he spoke when he shook my hand." —New York Sun.

Compassionate Feeling at Lourdes.

Without offering an opinion one way or the other as to the miracles at Lourdes the compassionate feeling that is brought into action there certainly is miraculous. The most fastidious people act as servants of the most loathsome patients. No less a lady than the Comtesse d'En (ex-princess imperial of Brazil) employs herself as a bathing woman in the grotto and in cleansing and bandaging up sores. She helps for hours to carry patients into the plunge bath and immerse them. Her eldest son is a bathing man on the side of the grotto to set apart for men. Her two other sons help to carry patients on stretchers from the railway to the healing waters. It would be better if people did not need the stimulus of a miraculous place to move them to perform such humane actions, but we must take human nature as we find it and be glad of anything that raises it to a mean selfishness. It is to be regretted that one sees so much "shop" at Lourdes. It reminds one of the house of Tarbes now out of the Grotto chapel as large an income as the archbishop of Canterbury. —London Truth.

THE NEW STRAP AS SHOWN.

This day was a hard one. I said goodbye to Hubert and took another look at the sky, my hand on the parapet. I tripped along green gables and tall chimneys. I discovered and ransacked two or three beautiful pebbles. I leaped and allowed my way round mountain houses which would have struck terror into the marrow (sic) of any Swiss guide. I crossed ten skeleton bridges swinging high in air over the Jalen and found my way through the semidarkness of seven long tunnels.

I bagged and bought and stole bread and wine and cucumbers and fruit at lonely houses and from market going girls. I survived the fury of a terrific thunderstorm and found safety and rest within the great church at Calatayud. I looked up at its pure white plaster ceiling and dome, with its throng of saints and flowers, till tired of my toil, I fell asleep in the main aisle and was only disturbed by a very masculine and no-Christian kick from an old verger. I called on the alcobite, who gave me permission to occupy the lower floor of the hospital, where I deposited my bundle, and then marched round the old city. It is one of the dirtiest, yet most interesting of old world towns. —"A Vagabond in Spain." —Lauffmann.

An Oddity in Tars and Digits.

There is one curious fact respecting the animal creation with which you will never become acquainted if you depend on your textbooks for information. It is this: No living representative of the animal kingdom has more than five toes, digits or claws to each foot, hand or limb. The horse is the type of one-toed creation; the camel of the two-toed; the rhinoceros of the three-toed and the hippopotamus of four-toed animal life. The elephant and hundreds of other animals belonging to different orders belong to the great five-toed tribe. —St. Louis Republic.

They All Thumped.

He was a typical ramin—ragged, unwashed and seemingly taking a heap of comfort as he sat munching an apple on the steps of a tenement house in Elizabeth street the other evening. As I sat down beside him I asked:

"All right, are you getting along?"

"Well, how?" he replied.

"Father in work?"

"Yes; he's in work, but he only gets his board and clothes out of it. Dad's over on the island far 60 days for thumping man."

"And your mother—she lives up stairs, I suppose?"

"She did," he answered, "but she's done 15 days' time for thumping me."

"Then you are keeping house alone, eh?"

"Yes, I shall be now. I just got home myself today."

"Where have you been?"

"Oh, I got five days for thumping a kid as luffed when ma was arrested."

"You seem to be a thumping sort of family," I said as he gnawed away at his apple.

"Yes, I guess so," he replied, "and you haven't seen the hull of us yet. I've a brother who hangs out around the corner, and I'm expectin him along here every minute."

"Yes, and what will your brother do?"

"If I'm alone, he won't thump nobody but me, but if you are here he'll thump both of us together!"

I gave him a nickel cigar as a reward of merit, and moved on before the brother appeared. —Detroit Free Press.

The Darlington, Wis., Journal says editorially of a popular patent medicine:

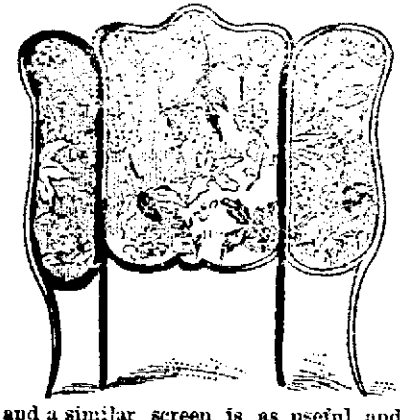

"We know from experience that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is all that is claimed for it, as on two occasions it stopped excruciating pains and possibly saved us from an untimely grave. We would not rest easy over night without it in the house." This remedy undoubtedly saves more pain and suffering than any other medicine in the world. Every family should keep it in the house, for it is sure to be needed sooner or later. For sale by Melville Bros., next to P. O. C. W. Heister, 58 Public Square.

SCREENS ALWAYS POPULAR.

One More Graceful Design That May Be Varied to Suit Furnishings.

Screen and cushions are articles of furnishing that are very dear to the heart of the modern decorator. They can hardly get too many of either, and it is as easy for the maker of each to be contented among his belongings as it is for the same addition to be crowded into the traditional omnibus.

Some screens are ornamental purely. Others serve a most valuable purpose. A high three panel screen shutting off the swing door into the kitchen from the closely-contending dining room of many of our city houses makes of an unsightly corner an attractive outlook.

and a similar screen is as useful and transforming if set across a basement hall to shut off the kitchen view that is bound otherwise to obtrude on the way to the dining room.

These screens are often covered with dark rich paper, neatly put on, those that are used for libraries and dining rooms being selected. Gay Japanese paper is another covering that is more enlivening. All the art fabrics, denims, canvases, Indian churries, the bright Persian stuffs—any of these may also be utilized as coverings.

For smaller screens, to screen off the fire or break an ugly corner in a straight room, the shape illustrated is new. The frame is in ebony finish, and the cover is a rich silk brocade. This arrangement admits of many variations, using the graceful design as a model for the frame only. One intended for a young girl's room is to be enameled in pink and covered with cretonne in a pattern of pink roses over a cream ground. A gilded frame has a white and gold tapestry covering, the handsome piece being intended for a white and gold apartment.

Elaborate Hairdressing.

The empress of Austria has one of the most wonderful heads of hair in Europe. It is black as night and quite touches the ground, even when she is standing up. The brushing of her hair takes as long as two hours every morning, and four lady's maids are told off to do duty. A chair is placed in the center of a white satin carpet, upon which the empress sits, letting down the wealth of hair until it falls like a black cataract about her. She was anxious to cut off what has been called her "glorious crown," and had it not been that the emperor pleaded very hard for her not to relinquish it would have had her wish carried out. Her jewels, however, she has cast aside, and, with the exception of the crown jewels, has distributed them right and left to her friends and dependents. —Lady Mary in Woman at Home.

A Woman Broker.

Women have demonstrated their fitness for so many vocations formerly securely closed against them that it is somewhat singular that the real estate business has not attracted more of them. They are not unknown in it, however, and one of them, now Mrs. W. G. Mulligan of New York, has conducted some large transactions. She inherited her taste for the business from her father, after whose death she became the first woman real estate broker in New York and was admitted as a member of the Real Estate Exchange. Her interest in real estate matters is lively, and she is enthusiastic regarding the development of the Tremont section of the city, with which she has close familiarity, and which she has been developing in a marvelous manner.

Woman Lawyer Wins a Divorce Case.

Attorney Nellie G. Robinson has tried her first divorce case and got a decree in half an hour. This is the first time a divorce case has been tried in Ohio by a woman lawyer. The plaintiff was Cora Marshall, whose husband, formerly a waiter at the Queen City Club, was shown to be a brutal man. The decree was allowed for cruelty and abandonment. The courts have refused to hear divorce cases during vacation, and Judge Wilson refused to hear this one, but referred Miss Robinson to Judge Sayler, the bachelor. She made such an eloquent plea that he came right out to the bench and told her to go ahead. —Cincinnati Dispatch.

A Woman Counting the Stars.

The numbering of the heavenly bodies, whether planet, satellite or star of the smallest size, has been commenced at the Paris observatory by Miss Klumpke, doctor of sciences and assistant astronomer. In view of the publication of an international catalogue of the stars. The idea was formed at the astronomical congress in 1887, and already 150 photographs have been taken. Some only contain a dozen stars, this being a celestial desert, but others are crowded, even to the number of 1,500. The average number is 335 stars per photograph. Altogether, the catalogue is expected to contain about 3,000,000 stars.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward, in a paper in The Idler on "Woman on Wheels," confesses to a prejudice against bifurcated garments, but thinks, however, that the time is not far distant when the skirt will be the exception rather than the rule. One of Mrs. Ward's reasons is that some kind of sliding seat is on the eve of invention, or has been invented, that is going to revolutionize cycling, and this cannot be used with a skirt.

A STEP-LADDER

Used by Burglars who Robbed O. W. Bell's Residence.

Early Saturday Evening. While the family were absent—$100 worth of Jewelry stolen—The Police were notified, but no clue could be found.

Between 7:30 and 9 o'clock Saturday evening, the residence of O. W. Bell, at 708 west High street, was entered and robbed by burglars who secured about $100 worth of jewelry. The robbery was discovered about 9 o'clock and the police were notified immediately, and although the robbery was investigated immediately and a thorough search made for the thieves, no trace of them or clue to their identity was discovered.

Mr. Bell and family left home about 7:30 o'clock and left the lower part of the house securely locked but the burglars apparently did not attempt to gain an entrance to the lower floor, but taking a step-ladder which had been left outside the house, climbed to and gained an entrance through a window opening into the bath room on the second floor. The robbers ransacked everything in the upper part of the house, but no trace of them was found on the lower floor, and it is supposed they were upstairs and frightened away before they completed their work, when a junior member of the household entered the lower part of the house shortly before 9 o'clock. The robbery was discovered almost immediately upon the return of the family, and the police sent for. A hasty investigation was made by the family, and the following articles were missed:

An open-faced gold Alvin stop-watch with a sulky engraved on the back; a small silver watch; a lady's long solid gold chain with clasp in form of a shield, upon which "H. B." was engraved, a gent's gold watch chain, with C. H. B. engraved upon charm; one gent's gold band ring and two 33-caliber revolvers.

The step-ladder was left standing below the bathroom window, where the burglars are supposed to have made a hasty exit. The police are still working on the case in hopes of finding some clue to the identity of the thieves.

STOLE A COAT.

A Thief Robs a Dummy in Front of Loewenstein's.

But is Detected and Chased from a Street Car Which He Had Boarded—Coat Recovered.

Saturday evening between 5 and 6 o'clock a thief made a bold effort to get away with a $25 overcoat at Loewenstein's clothing store on the east side of the public square.

The thief stood on the sidewalk watching for a good opportunity, and when he saw a south bound street car near the north side of square he sprang into the north doorway of the clothing store and hastily removing the overcoat from a "dummy," ran across the square and boarded the car.

The clerks were all busy and none of them witnessed the theft and the thief would doubtless have escaped with the coat, but a man who was passing the store saw him take it and hastened to notify Mr. Loewenstein. The latter ran after the car and caught it before it reached the south side of the square, but the thief saw that he had been discovered, and before Mr. Loewenstein reached the car, sprang from it and ran down the alley in the southwest corner of the square. As he passed the stairway on the south side of the Parmenter block, he threw the overcoat beneath the steps and continued his flight. Fortunately for Mr. Loewenstein, F. A. Hume, who was returning from supper, saw the man dispose of the coat and returned it to the owner.

For Giving his Son Tobacco on the School Grounds.

George Taylor, against whom an affidavit was filed in mayor's court Friday, was fined $8.00 by the mayor this morning.

Taylor was charged with giving his six year old son tobacco on the west Spring street school grounds, and evidence showed that one of the teachers took the tobacco from the boy, whereupon Taylor returned and gave him more.

After several witnesses had been examined he concluded to plead guilty, and the mayor imposed a fine of $5 and costs. The amount was paid and Taylor was released.

It has never been our policy to sell goods of an indifferent character. Before merchandise can gain entrance into our house, we must first be thoroughly convinced of its FITNESS. This, perhaps, we apply more to Kid Gloves than to any other class of goods and thus avoid the many deceptive gloves the market is flooded with. We are specially interested in every pair of gloves we sell, "we want them to be good", and if occasionally a blemish is found, WE RECTIFY IT MOST CHEERFULLY.
